Dana Inkster - an independent filmmaker and cultural marketer. She is the President & CEO of EM Workshop Inc. & the publisher of Lethbridge Living Magazine. Her portfolio is based on the age old practice of storytelling and includes short videos and broadcast documentaries including the award-winning National Film Board of Canada production:

“24 Days in Brooks”

Over the course of a decade Brooks, Alberta, transformed from a socially conservative, primarily white town to one of the most diverse places in Canada as immigrants and refugees flocked to find jobs at the Lakeside Packers slaughterhouse. This film is a portrait of those people working together and adapting to change through the first-ever strike at Lakeside.

This documentary addresses issues of cultural diversity, immigration, human rights & social justice. After its showing, Dana will engage in discussion regarding the film, filmmaking, & her related insights & endeavors.
